The McHarg Fellowship is a $75,000 award given by The Ian L. McHarg Center for Urbanism and Ecology to an emerging voice in landscape architecture and its related fields.

The Fellowship is awarded competitively on an annual basis and the fellow is expected to be in residence at Penn, in Philadelphia, full-time for one academic year from the beginning of the Fall semester (August) through to the end of the Spring semester (May) in the following year.

The purpose of the Fellowship is to create a breakthrough opportunity for an emerging professional and/or academic, who would benefit most from support to conduct research, to teach, and to be mentored by faculty over the term of the fellowship.

The award constitutes $70,000 paid as salary to the fellow and an additional $5,000, awarded as a discretionary stipend for travel, research and exhibition related expenses.

The application deadline is Friday, December 30, 2022.

The McHarg Center's mission is to build on the University of Pennsylvania Stuart Weitzman School of Design's position as a global leader in urban ecological design. It brings together environmental and social scientists together with planners, designers, policymakers, and communities to develop practical, innovative ways of improving the quality of life in the places most vulnerable to the effects of climate change. It adheres to the values set forward by Justice and Belonging at Weitzman School of Design.
