

Alicia Imperiale is Assistant Dean at the Pratt Institute School of Architecture. She has taught history, theory and urban design at Pratt Institute, Yale University, Cornell University, Columbia University, Parsons School of Design, SciArc and Temple University. She received a BArch from Pratt Institute, an MFA from Hunter College, the City University of New York and an MA and PhD from Princeton University. Her scholarly work focuses on the impact of technology on art, architecture, representation, and fabrication in contemporary architecture and in postwar Italian architecture and urbanism. She is author of New Flatness: Surface Tension in Digital Architecture (Birkhauser, 2000), “Dynamic Symmetries” in Anne Tyng: Inhabiting Geometry (ICA, 2011), “Stupid Little Automata” in Architecture & Culture (2014), “Organic architecture as an Open Work,” (MAXXI Museum, Rome 2018), and “An Ineluctable Geometric Character: Luigi Moretti and a prehistory of parametric architecture” (Log, 2018). She was co-editor with Enrique Ramirez of the Journal of Architectural Education special issue on S,M,L,XL and its Futures (2015). She is co-editor of Log: Observations on architecture and the contemporary city 53 entitled “Perché Italia ora? | Why Italy now?” Her current book projects are Alternate Organics: the aesthetics of experimentation in art, technology & architecture in postwar Italy and Machine Consequences: Origins of Output. She was an Affiliated Fellow at the American Academy in Rome, recipient of a Graham Foundation for Advanced Studies in the Fine Arts Research Grant, an MIT Mellon Grant Initiative, Global Architecture History Teaching Collaborative grant, and a Cornell University Society for the Humanities Fellowship.