

Georgeen Theodore is an architect, urban designer, and Professor at New Jersey Institute of Technology's College of Architecture and Design, where she coordinates the school's Master of Urban Design Program. She received a Bachelor of Architecture from Rice University and a Master of Architecture in Urban Design from Harvard University's Graduate School of Design, where she graduated with distinction. Theodore is founding partner and principal of Interboro, a New York City- and Detroit-based design and planning office. Interboro has received many awards for its innovative and collaborative approach, including the Museum of Modern Art PS1's Young Architects Program, the Architectural League's Emerging Voices Award, and a national AIA Regional & Urban Design Award. Georgeen is an expert in coordinating complex urban projects that involve many diverse stakeholders, infrastructures and ecosystems. Her practice is inextricably linked to her urban design pedagogy and teaching.
