

Shima Clarke, PhD, PE is Professor of Construction Science and Management and the Acting Associate Dean for Undergraduate and Graduate Studies in the College of Architecture, Art and Construction at Clemson University. Her teaching focuses on structures, design-build, IPD, and construction management research methods. Her research focuses on construction education, design-build, structures, safety, and sustainability. She is the recipient of the American Institute of Constructors' W.A. Klinger Construction Education Award for her "longstanding contributions to construction education" and the Associated Schools of Construction's Outstanding Educator Award for her "contribution to Excellence in Teaching and Support for Construction Education."